

Please insert the following Abstract as a separate page after the claims.

ABSTRACT

A method for controlling the production of injection molded parts in an injection molding die, which comprises a cavity and, optionally, a mold core of an injection molding machine, during which the temperature of the die is controlled. In addition, the cavity and/or the mold core are/is directly heated or cooled.